"Made in North America" is the heart of who we are–always has been, always will be. You choose the frame, fabric or leather, and details. Our craftspeople tailor your furniture by hand, right here in North America, just like we have for almost a century.

After all this time, our commitment to crafting our products in North America has become our identity, our legacy, and our tradition. From traditions emerge pride, expertise, and quality that you can count on, year after year.

We're proud to continue making about 75% of our products-including all of our upholstery-in our own North American workshops.

Every piece, exactly how you want it. We earned our reputation as the interior design destination by offering seemingly endless custom options, many of which are made in our own workshops.

Almost a century ago, we began making furniture in Vermont, where we still own workshops today. Even as we've grown, we still make most of our pieces right here in North America.

Today, our craftspeople still begin with hand-selected wood, which is dried in our own kilns. Once the wood is ready, it's cut and sanded, carved or steam-bent, and assembled and finished under the watchful gaze of artisans who have tirelessly perfected their craft.

The result: something designed to be part of your family for years to come, and one of the most beautiful pieces of furniture you'll ever own.
