LEATHER 101

introduction to an artform

LEATHER FURNITURE FROM ETHAN ALLEN UTILIZES ENTIRE HIDES—NO SHORTCUTS LIKE SPLITS, CASTOFFS, BONDED PIECES, OR VINYL MATCHING. IT CAN TAKE AS MANY AS SEVEN HIDES TO UPHOLSTER A LEATHER SECTIONAL, AND WE CUT EACH HIDE AND COLOR-BLEND IT BY HAND.

grain

Our leather gets its surface appeal from its grain, which can be either left in its natural state or refined for a more consistent appearance.

- Thicker, more durable full-grain leather comes from the top part of the hide. It maintains the leather's original character, including its natural markings and texture, which are hallmarks of quality and authenticity.
- Top-grain leather still utilizes the upper part of the hide, but the surface is gently buffed for softness, pliability, and consistent dye absorption.

dye and finish

Dyes and finishes add varying degrees of color, protection, and even special effects.

- Aniline dyes keep things natural, highlighting the leather's grain and natural markings the way a stain highlights the natural characteristics of wood. Variations in color and texture, both when the leather is new and as it ages, are inherent to this look; many people find them highly desirable.
- Semi-aniline leather is aniline-dyed and then dyed a second time with a more opaque color. It has a protective finishing layer but still preserves some natural markings and color variations.
- Pigmented leathers are top grain leathers that are semi-aniline dyed and given a protective top coat, offering maximum durability and color consistency.
- Finishes like distressing, embossing, pull-up waxes, and oils can give any leather a distinctive appearance. We do not use banned chemicals in our finishes, and waxes are all natural.

tailoring

It's not easy to create the cozy comfort you feel when you sink into well-crafted leather furniture. That's why our artisans employ specialized tailoring techniques that may differ from what you see on fabric upholstery.

Air from inside a cushion can escape through a fabric's fibers when you sit; not so with leather. Sewing a denim panel to the underside of leather cushions allows that air transfer and gives your cushions that sink-in feeling.

It's important to note that while your leather furniture may arrive looking taut and tailored, leather is a natural material that stretches over time. A bit of pooling and the development of a more time-loved character are natural parts of the leather lifespan.

WHAT DO YOU PICTURE

when you think of leather?

No two leathers are alike; each is as unique as the environment from which it came. Every piece of our leather furniture is one of a kind, which we consider to be a mark of its quality and authenticity.

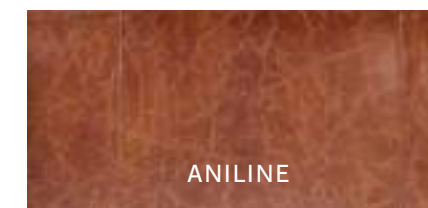

Each hide has its own grain patterns, just like a piece of wood. Leather can be smooth like a baseball, pebbled like a basketball, or have a mix of both textures on the same surface. Every leather also absorbs dye differently. Variations in texture—again, think baseball, basketball or a mix of both—affect how the dye settles and how the color turns out.

Like wood, leather tells the story of something once alive. Its natural creases or scars, like the rings of a tree, result from its unique interaction with its environment. These markings may stand out from the rest of the hide because of the way they absorb dye. They're enhanced by dye in the way that wood grain is enhanced by stain.

To some people, these inherent textures, markings, and dye variations are signs of authenticity, and highly desirable. Others prefer a smooth surface and undeviating color, like they see in their car's interior.

With the right TLC, any leather can work in any room. Choose your leather for the way you live, but most importantly, choose the leather you love.

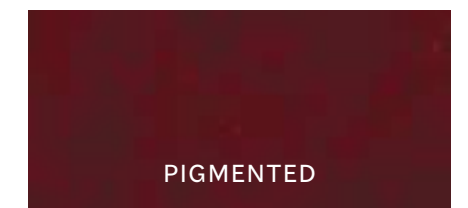

ANILINE

For those who love their leather bomber jacket, with its marbled color and its time-added character.

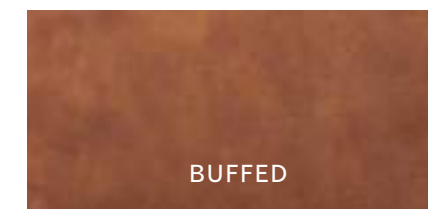

SEMI-ANILINE

For those who love their leather handbag or wallet: a bit of character, but more consistent color and fewer markings.

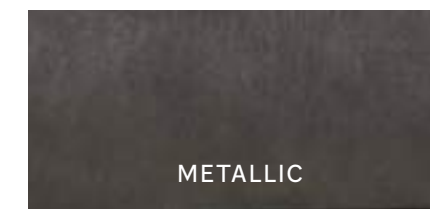

PIGMENTED

For those who want consistent, edge-to-edge color. This leather is for people who love their car interior.

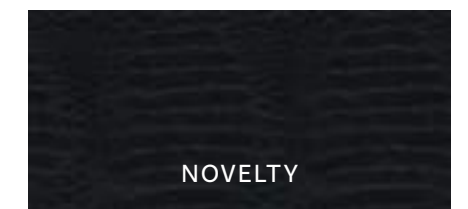

BUFFED

For those who like the feel of a leather that's soft and supple.

METALLIC

For those who prefer a pearlescent glow or shine.

NOVELTY

For those who want a distinct surface pattern embossed into the leather.

FOUR QUESTIONS

TO HELP YOU CHOOSE THE RIGHT LEATHER FOR YOUR FURNITURE

will your leather live in...

1

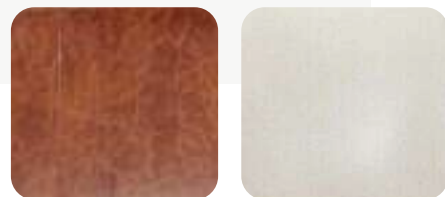

- A a low-traffic area
- B a space where kids and pets play?

are you drawn to...

- A a leather that wears its ongoing story on the surface; like a time-loved bomber jacket, it only gets better as it is scuffed, scratched, and lived in
- B a leather that arrives looking impeccable, like your car looked the day you drove it off the lot, and changes very little over time?

do you prefer...

- A a leather that shows the unique natural markings of a rich life well lived; you're comfortable with the element of surprise
- B a leather that has been treated to lessen its texture and color variation; what you see is what you get?

do you want your leather to look...

4

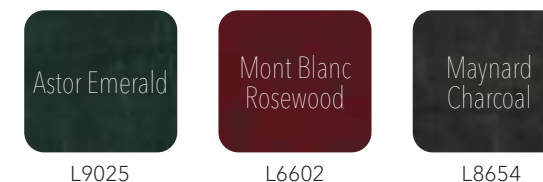

- A distressed, rustic, and vintage
- B sleek, oiled or waxed with a polished sheen?

IF YOU MOSTLY CHOSE A

You're an aficionado who adores leather's natural markings, color variations, and texture; you only love your leather more as it matures into a lived-in, time-loved look. Look for leather with terms like—

Prominent color variations • Prominent natural markings • Lightly protected or unprotected

IF YOU MOSTLY CHOSE B

You like your leather with a put-together vibe: The color is even, the leather on every part of the furniture looks the same, and it keeps its reliable good looks through years of use. Look for leather with terms like—

Minimal color variations • Minimal natural markings • Protected

IF YOU WERE IN BETWEEN

You like leather with a little character—some markings, maybe some color variation—but a more uniform, consistent look still calls your name. Look for leather with terms like—

Moderate color variation • Moderate natural markings • Rated for medium use

AN EXTRAORDINARY MATERIAL

deserves extraordinary care

Leather naturally develops a patina over time as it interacts with your body chemistry. How this patina comes to be depends on the way you live with and care for your leather. Our top three tips:

1. Keep away from vents and from direct sunlight to avoid cracking and fading.
2. Watch out for keys in your pocket or divots in your jeans; they can pierce your leather.
3. Blot spills rather than rubbing them into leather, and avoid commercial cleaners.

Keep your leather looking fabulous—and avoid voiding your warranty—with these essential use and care tips.
